

Background Check: The Answer to Business Security

According to the Federation of Small Business- a British business group, 58% of all small businesses in UK suffered at least one crime during the last 2-year period. They stated that "Crime, and the fear of crime, can directly impact on day to day business activities. It can damage a business image, resulting in the loss of existing customers and deterioration in the quality and range of services offered by the business, which will limit turnover (profits) and restrict business development." How can you and your small business face all these odds? The answer: Background Search Services on the Web Background Search Services provides the latest technology that gives you access to helpful information on the many problems that you face in your small businesses. You may be surprised with all the important and needed information that you can find with a good background checking service. Background checking in the past used to be very expensive. Hiring private detectives and agencies can really cost you a lot. Now with readily accessible databases over the internet, services such as these have become affordable and some are even free! However, in-depth background checking can never be substituted. Although services like these require subscription fees (which are smaller than you'd expect) – the information and the quality of services that you'll receive will be more than your money's worth. All the information you receive are guaranteed up-to-date, fast and easy. Internet Detective sites or Personal search Sites (as what they are often called) gives you access to all kind of formerly confidential information over the Internet. What are the things that you should be checking on for your business' protection? Criminal background Checks When dealing with people you don't know, checking the person's history of criminal activity (if there is one) would be a reasonable thing to do. These are the information that can be available to you: Criminal records FBI records Prison Records Sex offender status Background Check (for Pre-Employment Checking) A small print shop in Florida hired a special friendly guy as their bookkeeper. Although the new employee didn't offer much of his background, he sounded able and was willing to work for a cheap rate. Days later, the owner found out that the newly hired employee has robbed him of more than a hundred thousand dollars. The theft was never found. A late background check revealed that the said bookkeeper has previously been charged of embezzlement. Accident such as these could have been prevented by a simple background check. Background Check for Existing Employees (as a condition of Employment) Employees are trusted with company funds, valuable goods or purchasing powers that can be abused; but they can sometimes get involved in illegal activities that you'd never suspect. Regular background checking of your existing employees can help you prevent any crime incidents. Although this action requires legal advice, putting it as a condition of employment will not be an invasion of their privacy. Many business owners think of their company as a part of their family and would never think badly of their employees. But employees see you as the boss and not their father. Most employees are trustworthy; they do what is expected of them as they expect fair compensation from you. Background Check for the Company of Individual You are Doing Business With The possibility of a supplier or a contractor harming your business is always present. If that possibility exists, it is only right for you to do a background check on them. Information such as credit, the manager's or owner's backgrounds and the background of the company itself would be a helpful information to you. Background of Costumers To avoid getting left out of your costumer's payments, check their history for any records. One of the easiest targets for crimes is the Real Estate Business. They involve significant investment initially and over a period of time. Both landlords and tenants should check those who they are doing business with. The easiest solution would be a background check service. This service can give you access to a wide array of important information such as: Checking credit and the validity of Social Security Numbers Past criminal activity of tenants Past legal problems and tenant actions of landlords Charity and other community support Charitable organizations usually solicit donations from business establishments. Running a background check on the involved organization will make sure that your donated money will indeed be used for a good cause and will not link you to any illegal activities that may be involved by the said organization. Meet the challenges of running a small business today. Protect yourself with online database search services and ensure security for you, your employees and your customers.

About the Author

Bell Parker specializes in internet and business security also recommends Free Background Check

Source: <http://www.article-zine.com>