

Golf Caps Present a New Twist on Old Style Fashions

Golf Caps are the latest trend and not just for golfers. This genre of hats has hit a new high for head fashions. It used to be that a visor, or more traditional hat was the only style seen outside of the old school argyle caps. Now days, there are all kinds of golf caps that are great on or off the greens. Starting with the traditional golf caps, the styles, colors and fabrics have all benefitted from fashion forward thinking. No longer are the loud plaid patterns or dull grays the only choice. With bright colors contrasting in blues, yellows, beiges, blacks and deep browns, the golf cap of yesteryear is newer and better than ever with a slight twist on the argyles and stripes. The baseball style golf hats are always a good fit, lightweight and provide decent levels of protection from the sun. For the younger crowd, the trucker cap has indeed made its way onto the fairways. I'm sure several old timers are not so pleased, but these golf caps from Nickent bring style and comfort with the wider brim and increased area for ventilation. TaylorMade has a great line of hats and visors as well and you will see an edgier more mischievous look to them like the Nighthawk Tour Golf Caps in camouflage or jet black. These caps are definitely the latest fashions seen on pros from golf to surfing. With athletes crossing over into multiple sports the styles and fashions are following suit offering great renditions of the traditional apparel and gear. A favorite among the ladies are the linen hats. These frame the female face better than a traditional baseball style hat and they come in a great selection of colors. Lightweight and easy on the hair, these hats make a day on the course enjoyable and don't leave that awful hat line that most hats do. Visors are also popular among women for the same reason. Shielding the eyes and protecting the face from harmful UV rays is necessary, and visors do the trick without resulting in the hat head look that requires keeping the hat just to avoid embarrassment. Army caps are the newest style to hit the golf circuit. These caps are not only attractive on most people, but you can't help but have a sense of patriotism when adorned with one. Made of spandex and cotton twill, these hats give men the same benefit that linen hats do for the ladies. Softer on the hairline, the likelihood of creases is as slim as the shaft of your driver. Regardless of the style, golf caps are a great addition to any wardrobe and make for a little much needed variety on the greens. Wherever you reside, golf season is hitting its' stride and it's time to get out there. So, find a hat that best suits you and make a statement next time you head out to the fairway.
