

Mens Wedding Bands and Tradition

Mens wedding bands are traditionally worn at the base of the left ring finger. Although in some parts of the world, mens wedding bands may instead be seen worn on the right ring finger. As you know, a wedding band symbolizes marriage. Men and women wear wedding bands to symbolize their marriage and show off their commitment to fidelity, and to their spouse. This custom originates from Europe, but obviously has spread widely and throughout the world! During a wedding ceremony, it is typically the man that produces the mens wedding bands and womens wedding bands to exchange with his bride. But some ceremonies make use of ring bearers. These are typically young boys that are a part of either family. Their job is to carry the mens wedding band and womens wedding band on a special cushion or pillow up to the altar, where the rings are then placed on the marrying couple's fingers. While most religions and cultures allow bands of any material for marriage, mens wedding bands are primarily made of precious yellow gold, or possibly white gold. These are put together using yellow alloy of gold, copper, tin and bismuth. White gold is another popular choice for mens wedding bands, though the yellow white gold alloy has been replaced with nickel-gold alloy, and then rhodium. Titanium and platinum are also great choices for mens wedding bands. Titanium in particular is a popular choice, because it's durable, affordable, and an acceptable, ideal color of gun metal gray. Tungsten is another popular choice for mens wedding bands. There is also nickel silver and stainless steel. Both of these materials are good for constructing mens wedding bands that are pleasing to the eye, durable and yet very affordable. Less popular choices for materials for mens wedding bands include silver, brass and copper. These corrode and break down over time, which is why they are not often used. Mens wedding bands can complement the style of womens wedding bands, or they can create their own unique look. While mens wedding bands are often wider than womens wedding bands, they can be simple in design or elegant in design. Some bands may have plain finishes, while others have bands, grooves, engravings, even bandings of colors and other precious metals, such as gold or diamond or even platinum. For a full list of available mens wedding bands, check out sites like titanium-jewelry.com.

About the Author

Kimberly Green is Trying to locate the best in mens wedding bands. Kimberly has been searching out a new wedding ring for her husband that matches the new ring he purchased for her on their last anniversary.

Source: <http://www.article-zine.com>